

West Yellowstone Case Study

Enhancement of Urban Corridor

What was the client's issue presented to WWC?

For the City of Casper, the problem was the reconstruction of a long-neglected urban corridor to provide streetscape enhancements and spur future redevelopment of the Old Yellowstone District.

How did WWC brainstorm and collaborate with the client to find a solution?

WWC determined design elements be staked and coordinated with the contractor in order to provide them with the necessary information needed for construction.

How was the outcome defined as good or effective for your customer?

Completion of the project was instrumental in advancing the development of adjacent properties and renewed interest in the area.

Why did WWC feel the solution chosen was the best choice?

WWC was the best choice because of our ability to complete the project on time and in the most effective manner.
